DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Women of Killingly who would like more knowledge as to exercising the right of suffrage conferred upon them by the nation will have their opportunity this (Friday) evening when they are invited to the home of Judge and Mrs. Milton A. Shumway.

Well informed speakers will treat various phases of the use of the ballot and answer any questions that may be propounded to them by any one in their audience. The meeting is to be strictly non-partisan and women who have been anti-suffragists are especially invited to attend. For it is assumed these women will not decline the right to vote which they now possess while other women are having an equal voice with men in determining the policies of the government.

The sole purpose of the meeting is to give the women of Killingly who have not informed themselves as to voting an opportunity to have the fundamentals of the use of the ballot and procedure at elections explained in clear and concise manner. Many women will welcome the opportunity given for in their busy every day life they have had no time to give to studying the use of the ballot and many other things which they will want to know about voting.

Women of all shades of political preference have been invited to the meeting which is held in the interest of all and not in aid of any party or parties.

D. E. Jette, member of the court of burgesses, received a telegram from the State Chamber of Commerce asking him to investigate and report as to the amount of hard coal that has been received by Danielson dealers during the season since cold weather ended. Mr. Jette's investigation conducted in accordance with the telegraphic request develops the fact that coal men here have received only 14 per cent of the amount that usually has come through by this time in a normal year. Mr. Jette said Thursday afternoon that he understands that the information he has supplied will be used to speed up coal shipments to this territory, where there are scores of families without a pound of coal and no early prospect of getting any.

R. C. Young, deputy automobile inspector, was notified Thursday morning that a 1920 Ford touring car owned by Arthur Bennett of Plainfield and stolen from the main street of that place just before 2 o'clock Wednesday evening had been found abandoned in the vicinity of Moosup. It appears that exhaustion of the supply of gasoline in the car led to its abandonment. It the meantime police departments all through eastern Connecticut and in southern Massachusetts and Rhode Island had been notified.

Ballot Law and Ella Scott, Danielson horses entered by C. H. Michaelis, proprietor of the Danielson Inn, won a race on the same day at Kingston, N. H. This fact is particularly pleasing to the local followers of the racing game.

Warden Damase Bonais is an official and a citizen who is willing to certify that the Capt. Put motor pump is again in excellent working order. The warden essayed to hold a stream while the pump was being given a try out in the Connecticut Village section, but the pump and contrary line of hose wrenched and squirmed until the warden had the pump about 15 feet in the air, after which there was a hurry call to shut off the pump and bring an outfit of dry clothing.

Danielson, with other parts of the town of Killingly, has during the past few days, developed a whole brigade of financial experts and prophetic wizards of industry. Anyone of them can tell you just how long a time will elapse before anyone of all of the town's manufacturing concerns will be in the hands of a receiver. They know the exact inside facts about the affairs of very corporation, how much money it has made and how much money it has lost since the war began. They know who has bought this plant or who another one is going to be sold to. It's really all very wonderful to hear them rave. The fact that $500,000 purposes to buy out a million dollar one doesn't seem incongruous to them at all. They know yet not a man jack of them has the slightest idea about the capitalization, receipts, earnings, capacity, value of property, holdings, stock value or any other essential thing pertaining to any one of the plants discussed. They're getting their readings from Oulie and seemed perfectly content in spreading their calamitous tales—while they have nothing more profitable to do.

Miss Jennie Williams attended the Kingston fair Thursday. Pearl F. Wood, who has been an instructor at the Columbia university summer school in visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wood, Academy street.

Danielson was misrepresented on a number of occasions in the state police department, tried in the superior court here last week. Judge Maibie has filed a decision that Mr. Ridd shall be penalized $25.

In connection with his finding Judge Maibie says: "The assault seems aggravated by the official capacity of the defendant."

Bea said that he was assaulted by Ridd on a night over a year ago while the state police officer was in North Grovesville where he had been doing duty during the period when there was a strike on at the mill of the Grovesville company.

Ridd made no appearance or defense in court. Bea said that he was riding in the car of a friend when Ridd jumped on the running board opened the door of the car and punched him in the jaw, "making me dizzy," as he described it. Bea asked for damages and was successful in his action. He was represented by Attorney Charles L. Torrey.

Trial of the case of Alva J. Dixon of Sterling vs. Byron M. Lewis of East Killingly was commenced in the superior court in this city before Judge Maibie Thursday morning.

This action, which has been claiming the attention of the courts for about three years and which has received considerable from the supreme court, involves not greater issues than whether Lewis should pay damages that Dixon claims is due him for destruction wrought, the plaintiff alleges, by stray cattle that he charges were the property of Lewis.

Attorneys Harry E. Back of Danielson and Charles E. Seale of this city are counsel for Mr. Dixon while Mr. Lewis is represented by Attorney W. Woodward of Danielson and Charles L. Torrey of this city.

Mr. Dixon was called to the stand as the first witness Thursday morning. Through questioning, his attorneys brought forth that in 1917 he was living on the Dixon homestead farm in North Sterling, but much of the time was away at work.

At about potato planting time a herd of cattle pastured on a nearby property came onto his place, having been chased from where they were being kept. Mr. Dixon drove them off. The next morning, which was Sunday, the cattle were back on the Dixon place, and during Sunday, the witness testified, Lewis and another man came looking for stray cattle. Witness said he told Lewis that he had injured the cattle and that he would have notified him they were at large. Lewis seemed affable and said that if any damage had been done he would settle.

July 15, 1917, Dixon's corn was damaged as the result of another visitation from the cattle and the stray herd practically destroyed it. Dixon testified that he found the cattle in his orchard and that he drove them off and notified Lewis, who said that he could not come down because his cow was not feeling well, but would send someone and come down himself the following Sunday.

The following Saturday witnesses said he telephoned to Lewis from Moosup and inquired what time he would be down to North Sterling the following day, and agreement finally being made to meet Sunday afternoon and adjust the damages.

That night Dixon said he found three head of stray cattle on his property, and he put them in his barn and locked the door. Witness said he again called Lewis and told him of what had transpired. As Lewis did not appear the following day, witness learned that the town clerk of Sterling, registered the cattle in his possession as strays and advertised them for sale. Later someone came to his place and asked for the door of the barn where the stray cattle were being kept and took them away.

Mr. Dixon claimed that the stray cattle ruined 3-4 of an acre of corn, totally destroyed his garden, damaged his orchard and injured a field of hay to such an extent that some of it could not be cut.

Various witnesses were heard during the day. James Smith, 28, colored, a Putnam resident who came here from Tampa, Fla., about a year ago, appeared in the city court, under suspended sentences imposed on him for theft. It was charged that Smith stole a watch belonging to Prince Richardson and a savings bank containing about $20, owned by the same person. About a month ago Smith was arrested upon another occasion to face a charge of stealing $20 from a club of which he is a member.

The watch that Smith stole from Richardson has been recovered by Captain Bulger and returned to its owner, but the savings bank is missing as is also the $20 that disappeared on another occasion. Smith received a sentence of six months in jail on each of the two counts of the sentences were suspended after a plea for leniency for the prisoner.
